

Howard Green, <http://howardgreen.com/>

FULL BIO

Howard Green is an author, broadcaster, and moderator. He is one of the founders and builders of Business News Network in Canada, where he anchored from the channel's first day in 1999 until the end of May, 2014. Green is best known for hosting BNN's flagship interview show, Headline with Howard Green, for six years. On Headline, Green interviewed everyone from Alan Greenspan to Tony Blair to Larry Summers to T. Boone Pickens to Sir Richard Branson---not to mention an endless number of North American CEOs, decision makers and market players. For almost ten years, he also hosted BNN's popular Market Call, a half hour phone in show for investors seeking advice from leading money managers, and for six years The Business News with Howard Green, the primetime news program and precursor to Headline. In January 2013, Green released his first book, Banking on America: How TD Bank Rose to the Top and Took on the USA published by HarperCollins. It was an immediate best seller and was released in the United States in paperback in May 2014. Alongside Charles Bronfman, Green has co-authored a second book---Distilled: A Memoir of Family, Seagram, Baseball and Philanthropy, again under the imprint of HarperCollins published in October 2016---a Globe and Mail and Toronto Star bestseller as well as an instant bestseller on Amazon. In 2017 it was named a finalist for The National Business Book Award. Green also moderates at conferences and consults to corporations, institutional investors and educational institutions. He is the host and executive producer of a new podcast, Ignition with Howard Green, available on iTunes and other podcasting platforms. Please visit and "like" the Ignition with Howard Green Facebook page.

In 2006, Green took a one-year sabbatical from BNN at Columbia University in New York City. He was one of ten business journalists selected from around the world by Columbia for the prestigious Knight-Bagehot Fellowship that provides an opportunity for those chosen to deepen their understanding of business.

Green is also a prize-winning documentary maker. He directed, wrote and co-produced "The Investigation of Swissair 111", a highly-acclaimed 90 minute film that took viewers inside the four and half year inquiry into a plane crash that cost the lives of 229 people. It was one of the most complex aviation probes in history. The documentary was a co-production of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC) and Swiss National Television. For his work on the film, Green won the top television prize in Canada, The Gemini Award. He was also nominated for two Emmys for a U.S. version that aired on the PBS series, NOVA. Green's film was also a finalist for The Japan Prize and a duPont-Columbia Award. It has been broadcast worldwide.

Howard Green began covering business in 1988. For ten years, he was a contributing producer and reporter at "Venture", a weekly business magazine program on CBC-TV. He also reported from Canada for PBS' "Nightly Business Report" from 1989-94. From 1995-99, he produced and reported for CBC's info technology and media series, "Undercurrents", and from 1990 until 2004, Green made nearly a dozen documentaries for which he received a number of awards. His work has been seen in some 50 countries.

Between 1983 and 1988, Howard Green was co-host and field producer at "What's New?", CBC's nationally broadcast newsmagazine aimed at a youth audience. From 1981 to 1983, he worked as a local TV news reporter throughout Canada's Atlantic provinces for CBC and CTV stations. Green is a native of Halifax, Nova Scotia, has a Bachelor of Journalism from Carleton University in Ottawa and a Masters from Columbia University in New York. From 2013 until 2016, he served on the Board of Directors of the Canadian Journalism Foundation.

Howard Green, <http://howardgreen.com/>